Article - The Scottish government holds talks with the USA This article about the Scottish government's willingness to hold talks with the US Supreme Court in Washington, D.C., talks about legal possibilities for Scottish independence and the implications of the independence process for the UK and the US. The USA has the highest divorce rate in the world () and the 2014 divorce rate in Scotland alone is near the highest rate in the world. In 2010 the rate in Scotland was the third highest in the world, behind Australia and New Zealand. To be clear, that high divorce rate has been going on for a long time. () It has been estimated that there will be more than 500,000 divorces in Scotland by 2010. () If more than half of Scots are single by the time independence is achieved, can Scots be blamed for the divorce rate? There are other factors that should be considered. Of course, there is the widely-accepted fact that divorce rates have been rising for a long time. In the 1970s for example, in the US, the divorce rate was 10 times higher than today. () Could marriage in Scotland be at risk? Is there a risk that Scotland could suffer a divorce rate equivalent to that found in the US? The answer to that question is no. Yes, the divorce rate is currently high and not healthy, but the divorce rate in Scotland is not the highest in the world. In fact, the divorce rate in Scotland is one of the lowest in the world. In 2012, New Zealand reported the highest divorce rate in the world at 20 divorces per 1,000 married people. Belgium was second highest at 17 divorces per 1,000 married people. The lowest rate was at 6 divorces per 1,000 married people in China.
